Safeguarding standards met

The safeguarding standards are met. This means that leaders and/or those responsible for governance and oversight fulfil their specific responsibilities and have established an open culture in which safeguarding is everyone's responsibility and concerns are actively identified, acted upon and managed. As a result, pupils are made safer and feel safe.

How we evaluate safeguarding

When we inspect schools for safeguarding, they can have the following outcomes:

- Met: The school has an open and positive culture of safeguarding. All legal requirements are met.
- Not met: The school has not created an open and positive culture of safeguarding. Not all legal requirements are met.

Expected standard

Achievement

Expected standard

At the end of key stage 4, pupils generally achieve in line with the national averages for GCSE subjects. Similarly, disadvantaged pupils typically achieve in line with other disadvantaged pupils nationally at the end of Year 11. Pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities make positive progress from their starting points.

Leaders ensure that all pupils acquire the important knowledge and skills that they need in areas such as reading and writing. For example, pupils who require further support with their reading fluency receive individual and impactful extra help. Pupils who speak English as an additional language are helped to quickly acquire the language skills that they need to access the wider curriculum. As a result, they are successful and learn alongside their peers.

Overall, by the time pupils leave the school they are well prepared for their next steps in education or training.

Attendance and behaviour

Expected standard

Leaders are systematic in their promotion and focus on regular attendance. Consequently, the majority of pupils attend well. Leaders are proactive in how they seek to remove barriers to regular school attendance. They provide individualised support for those who find attending frequently difficult. These actions have been impactful and the number of pupils who are persistently absent is reducing. Leaders are particularly careful about the support for new pupils, many of whom arrive with previous barriers to attending school regularly. Leaders seek to quickly overcome any obstacles to regular attendance and use a wide range of support and strategies to help. They also ensure that families build positive habits that aid pupils to attend regularly.

Pupils behave well. They are proud of their school community, which is welcoming and considerate. Pupils are friendly and engaging and communicate with confidence. They are ambitious and like to talk about their learning, interests and ambitions. Pupils have positive attitudes to their learning. Lessons are calm and settled. Pupils who need extra help in managing their emotions receive effective support. Pupils frequently explore the importance of respect. Pupils know that bullying, discrimination and harassment are unacceptable. Any such incidents are taken seriously and addressed quickly by leaders.

Curriculum and teaching

Expected standard

Leaders have an accurate and detailed understanding of how well the curriculum helps pupils learn and how effective teaching is. In some lessons, checking for gaps in pupils' knowledge is not as consistent as it could be. Leaders recognise this and reducing this variability remains a key school development priority.

Leaders have further refined aspects of curriculum and teaching. Teachers' subject knowledge is detailed. As a result, pupils generally benefit from well-designed learning activities that help them to connect learning and build on what they already know. Leaders and staff ensure that important knowledge and skills in reading, writing and oracy are prioritised. This helps pupils to successfully access the school's curriculum. Pupils study a wide range of subjects at key stage 3. This helps them to make informed decisions about the GCSE subjects they select in key stage 4 that suit their aptitudes and interests.

When required, teachers typically provide pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities and those who are disadvantaged with the support they need. They generally adapt their lessons well so that pupils successfully access the same learning as their peers.

Inclusion

Expected standard

Whenever pupils join the school, their needs are quickly identified. Pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities (SEND) are well supported, as are those who speak English as an additional language. Leaders make checks to ensure that the support works as intended. Where needed, they make timely changes. Teachers individually support pupils with SEND to ensure that they achieve well. Pupils with other barriers to their learning such as disadvantaged pupils, or those known, or previously known, to social care, are equally carefully supported.

Leaders are mindful of how to help ensure that pupils are ready to learn. They help pupils to start the day positively, for example ensuring pupils have the correct equipment, have had breakfast and know who to talk to should they have any concerns. Additionally, vital communication skills are supported, such as through additional language development time and reading activities.

Pupils, rightly, consider the school's new specially resourced provision for pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities to sit at the heart of the school. It symbolises the impactful individualised support that pupils are entitled to and the care that staff have for all pupils. Pupils are justifiably confident that they will receive the support they need.

Leadership and governance

Expected standard

Leaders, including governors and the trust, have an accurate understanding of the school's strengths and areas that require further improvement. Leaders frequently check the impact of the changes that they have enacted. They modify and change if necessary. Importantly, the actions of leaders are unfailingly in the best interests of all pupils.

Leaders clearly communicate to staff where school developments are needed. Staff appreciate this clarity. Staff are diligent in playing their part in continued school improvement and ensuring that pupils receive an effective education. Staff are positive about working at the school. Workload and wellbeing are an important priority that leaders oversee well. Leaders ensure that staff have the training they need to develop their teaching approaches, subject knowledge and safeguarding knowledge. The training provided also closely aligns to the school improvement priorities.

Governors and the trust meet their statutory responsibilities, such as overseeing the actions of leaders. Governors seek the views of parents and carers. They regularly spend time with pupils in order to understand how well the school works for them. This has informed changes to further support the most vulnerable pupils. As a result, leaders have developed innovative school strategies which have been successful in removing barriers to education. Leaders are outward looking and work with agencies, the local authority and other organisations to continue to strengthen practice.

Personal development and wellbeing

Expected standard

Leaders ensure that all pupils, including pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities and pupils who speak English as an additional language, receive a broad education. It is designed to help them to keep safe, understand the world and develop ambition for their futures.

Pupils' social and moral development is carefully woven through school activities, including regular 'culture' lessons. Pupils are proud of the diversity of their school and develop a secure shared understanding of fundamental British values as well as enjoying learning about each other's backgrounds. Staff model the respectful and inclusive behaviour that they expect from pupils. Tutors and pastoral leaders thoughtfully address important topics such as relationships and consent. Consequently, pupils have a clear understanding of what to expect of others and how to identify controlling or coercive behaviour. Local risks are well understood. Leaders are innovative and seek experts and agencies. They help to teach pupils about how to keep themselves safe as well as to identify and report risk.

Pupils know that staff have their best interests at heart. They trust and listen to the advice provided. Pastoral support is organised to ensure staff are available whenever needed. They have the necessary expertise to identify problems and respond swiftly. Pupils know who to contact should they have worries and that staff will take any concerns seriously. Where pupils have increased vulnerabilities, specific support is put in place to minimise risks.

Activity clubs and trips, such as theatre visits, are an important part of pupils' experiences and leaders make sure that all can participate. Educational trips are highly anticipated and form an important method for building cohesion across the school community.

Careers education helps ensure that pupils know about the wide range of opportunities that exist for their futures, including work, apprenticeships and university.

Needs attention

Post 16 provision

Needs attention

Over a number of years, students in the sixth form have not achieved as well as they should. This has limited how well some students have been prepared for life after they leave school. Leaders recognise this and have made a series of changes to improve the quality of post-16 education and to match the curriculum more closely to students' needs. These changes are beginning to have a positive effect. Current students benefit from consistent teaching. Teachers have suitable subject knowledge. Where needed, disadvantaged pupils and pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities are supported to access learning. Improvements are recent and it is too early to see the overall impact on students' achievement over time.

Many sixth-form students contribute to the wider school through volunteering. They act as positive role models. Students are proud to help younger pupils practise reading, or to help keep the school site neat and tidy. These opportunities allow students to give back, developing their self-esteem and experience. Careers education is compelling in the sixth form. Students learn about a wide range of options, including local employment patterns, as well as future education and training.

What it's like to be a pupil at this school

Pupils are extremely proud of their school. They appreciate how staff want the very best for them. Pupils value the diversity and range of cultures they see in their peers, which they learn more about in school. When pupils join the school, they are warmly welcomed and settle in quickly. The school makes sure that any barriers to learning are quickly identified and minimised.

Sixth-form students are highly motivated. They are excellent role models for younger pupils. Students willingly engage in whole-school responsibilities, such as helping in the 'swap shop' or in reading activities. This boosts their experience and aspiration. Students welcome the detailed subject knowledge that teachers have and are keen to do as well as they can. Leaders recognise that in the past sixth-form outcomes have been too low. A range of appropriate changes have been made, although it is too early to see their full impact.

Lessons are calm. Pupils enjoy their learning. They are keen to complete their work and are generally well supported by their teachers to close any gaps in their knowledge. In the few places where checking for understanding is less consistent, leaders are taking appropriate steps.

Behaviour across the school is positive. Pupils feel safe and are respectful of each other. They have no concerns about bullying. Pupils take the school's messages about the importance of consent and positive relationships seriously. As a result, pupils are confident that should any poor behaviour occur, including discrimination, it would be quickly and effectively dealt with.

Pupils' attendance is in line with national averages. Where some pupils find attending well more difficult, leaders are effective in helping them to improve. This support is carefully considered and personalised, for example putting in place support to help those pupils who join the school mid-year to develop positive attendance habits from the very start.

Next steps

- Leaders should ensure a consistent approach across the school in how staff check pupils' understanding effectively and address gaps in pupils' knowledge.

- Leaders should continue to further reduce levels of persistent absence.
 - Leaders should ensure that the sixth-form curriculum meets the needs of students so that they achieve consistently well.

About this inspection

This school is part of Excalibur Academies Trust, which means other people in the trust also have responsibility for running the school. The trust is run by the chief executive officer, Nick Lewis, and overseen by a board of trustees, chaired by Susan Clarke.

Inspectors carried out this full inspection under section 5 of the Education Act 2005.

Following our renewed inspection framework, all inspections are now led by His Majesty's Inspectors (HMIs) or by Ofsted Inspectors (OIs) who have previously served as HMIs.

To evaluate the effectiveness of safeguarding, inspectors: reviewed the single central record; took account of the views of leaders, staff and pupils; and considered the extent to which the school has created an open and positive culture around safeguarding that puts pupils' interests first.

Inspectors held meetings with the headteacher, senior leaders, special educational needs and disabilities coordinator, curriculum leaders and other staff.

Inspectors visited a sample of lessons, spoke to pupils about their learning and looked at samples of pupils' work.

Inspectors examined a range of documentation provided by the school, including leaders' self-evaluation and improvement plans.

Inspectors considered the responses to Ofsted Parent View. They also took into consideration the responses to the staff and pupil surveys as well as speaking to staff and pupils throughout the inspection.

The school meets the requirements of the provider access legislation, which requires schools to provide pupils in Years 8 to 13 with information and engagement about approved technical education qualifications and apprenticeships.

The school includes provision for pupils with moderate learning difficulties, with 6 pupils currently on roll.

The school currently makes use of 4 unregistered alternative provisions.

Our grades explained

Exceptional

Practice is exceptional: of the highest standard nationally. Other schools can learn from it.

Strong standard ●

The school reaches a strong standard. Leaders are working above the standard expected of them.

Expected standard ●

The school is fulfilling the expected standard of education and/or care. This means they are following the standard set out in statutory and non-statutory legislation and the professional standards expected of them.

Needs attention ●

The expected standards are not met but leaders are likely able to make the necessary improvements.

Urgent improvement ●

The school needs to make urgent improvements to provide the expected standard of education and/or care.

The Office for Standards in Education, Children's Services and Skills (Ofsted) inspects services providing education and skills for children and learners of all ages, and inspects and regulates services that care for children and young people.
