Introduction

This inspection was carried out by Ofsted under Sections 49 and 50 of the Childcare Act 2006 on the quality and standards of the registered early years provision. 'Early years provision' refers to provision regulated by Ofsted for children from birth to 31 August following their fifth birthday (the early years age group). The registered person must ensure that this provision complies with the statutory framework for children's learning, development and welfare, known as the Early Years Foundation Stage.

The provider must provide a copy of this report to all parents with children at the setting where reasonably practicable. The provider must provide a copy of the report to any other person who asks for one, but may charge a fee for this service (The Childcare (Inspection) Regulations 2008 regulations 9 and 10).

The setting also makes provision for children older than the early years age group which is registered on the voluntary and/or compulsory part(s) of the Childcare Register. This report does not include an evaluation of that provision, but a comment about compliance with the requirements of the Childcare Register is included in Annex B.

Please see our website for more information about each childcare provider. We publish inspection reports, conditions of registration and details of complaints we receive where we or the provider take action to meet the requirements of registration.

Description of the childminding

The childminder was registered in 1994. She lives with her husband and two children in the Sandal area of Wakefield. This is within walking distance of local amenities. The whole of the ground floor and the bathroom on the first floor of the property is used for childminding. There are two steps to the entrance of the premises. There is an enclosed garden available for outside play.

The childminder is registered to care for a maximum of six children under eight years at any one time, of whom no more than three may be in the early years age range. There are currently four children attending who are within the Early Years Foundation Stage, one attends full-time and others attend on a part-time basis. The childminder also offers care to children aged over five years to 12 years. She is registered on the Early Years Register and on both the voluntary and compulsory parts of the Childcare Register. She is a member of the National Childminding Association.

The overall effectiveness of the early years provision

Overall the quality of the provision is good.

The childminder provides a friendly, welcoming environment with a good range of stimulating activities that are available to all children, therefore, promoting inclusive practice. This enables all children to make good progress in all aspects of their learning and development. She has an effective knowledge of each child's needs and ensures that she promotes all children's welfare and learning well. The childminder has developed successful relationships with the parents and there are generally good systems in place to exchange information with others involved in children's learning and care. Overall, there is an effective self-evaluation system in place to reflect on and evaluate the practice, which contributes to maintaining continuous improvement well.

What steps need to be taken to improve provision further?

To further improve the early years provision the registered person should:

- improve how the information shared with parents and other settings that children attend is used to promote continuity and support individual children's learning and progression
- develop further the culture of reflective practice and self-evaluation to identify the setting's strengths and priorities for development that will improve the quality of provision for all children.

The effectiveness of leadership and management of the early years provision

Children are effectively safeguarded because the childminder clearly understands her role in child protection and is fully aware of the procedures to follow should a concern arise. All of the records required for safeguarding and promoting children's welfare are maintained. Risk assessments clearly identify aspects of the environment that need to be checked on a regular basis. This includes effective risk assessments for each type of outing. The home is safe and conducive to learning and children clearly thrive as a result of the setting they are in.

The effectiveness with which the childminder deploys resources is good because she uses space well within her home for the children. Furniture, equipment and resources are of a good quality and appropriate for the ages of children to support their learning and development. The childminder meets with other childminders, reads relevant publications and has links with the local Sure Start Children's Centre to keep up-to-date with current practice. The childminder has steps in place to ensure resources and the environment is sustainable. For example, children water the strawberries that are growing in the garden to help them grow and use recycled packaging to make models. The childminder effectively evaluates what her priorities for improvement are within some aspects of her service through personal reflection and from discussions with parents. Although, she has not sufficiently evaluated the impact that any improvements made have on the outcomes for children. The recommendation from the previous inspection has been successfully implemented, which includes updating information within the complaints policy that is shared with parents. The childminder expresses effective ambition, vision and drive to develop the service further. For example, she is considering embarking on a Level 3 qualification in working with children and young people.

Successful relationships have been developed with parents and children, which contributes to inclusion, meeting children's needs consistently and providing continuity of care. The childminder meets the individual needs of children well, irrespective of background or ability. Communication between the childminder and the parents is very good. Their views are frequently sought and their feedback is valued. When children start, the childminder obtains information from parents and observes the children to find out what they know, what they can do and enjoy. This identifies children's starting points and forms the basis for ongoing assessment. Although, the childminder does not clearly demonstrate how she uses the information from parents and from those professionals within other settings that children attend to identify learning priorities within the planning. Thank you cards from parents highly praise the childminder for the quality of service that their children receive.

The childminder is aware of the importance of making links with other care providers that children may attend and has some effective systems in place, for example, by being involved in the child's transition from leaving nursery to starting school. This includes sharing information between the parents and the other setting. She also takes time to read stories to the children and has discussions about starting school to help prepare them for the change.

The quality and standards of the early years provision and outcomes for children

The childminder has a good understanding of the learning, development and welfare requirements, which contributes to her effectively promoting children's welfare and learning. Good relationships have been established and children make good progress in their learning in relation to their capabilities and starting points. The children's assessment profiles are well presented and provide parents with a personalised record of their child's progress. These include observations that are matched to the areas of learning, photographs of children involved in activities and things that they have made. The childminder has a system for tracking children's progress across all the areas of learning to identify learning priorities.

A very child-centred environment is provided. The childminder makes good use of resources within the local community to extend children's experiences. For example, children regularly attend events and activities at the toddler group and the local Sure Start Children's centre. The children are confident and are given time and space to enjoy and achieve well by being able to play independently as well as take part in adult-initiated activities. They are supported well by the childminder at appropriate times, demonstrating that she understands when and when not, to intervene. Young children make their own choices of what they want to play with and enjoy exploring the utensils in the role-play kitchen which helps children to develop their personal and social skills. Young children also show an interest in watching the wild-life outdoors, therefore, developing their knowledge and understanding of the world and communication and language skills when talking about what they can see. Children demonstrate their creative skills as they enjoy singing their favourite action songs and rhymes. Furthermore, they learn to name shapes and colours through games and counting in daily routines. Everything that happens within the day is used as an opportunity to learn.

Warm and trusting relationships have been developed between the childminder and the children, which demonstrate that they feel safe. Children's health and growing independence are supported extremely well. Effective procedures and routines are in place to manage hygiene, illness and cross-infection. Children learn about the benefits of healthy eating well. The childminder uses fresh ingredients to prepare meals for the children, such as, lasagne, cauliflower, carrots and broccoli. The childminder and children sit together at meal times where they learn to develop their social skills. Children have good opportunities to engage in a varied range of physical activities, both indoors and out and gain a secure understanding about the importance of regular exercise and fresh air as part of maintaining a healthy lifestyle. Children learn to care about and respect each other, through learning to share, take turns and use good manners. The childminder successfully provides a wide range of activities that captures children's interests and therefore, they behave well. The childminder actively promotes equality and diversity and she makes the most of a good range of resources that represent diversity to help children understand about the society they live in.
